Anne Ashbolt says:

"if it's not good, you don't sell it," says Anne. "I was once so unhappy with one of our first batches of elderflower sparkling that i just tipped it down the sink. If it sounds like I'm a perfectionist about my products it's because I am. Consistent quality is the key to our business"

"The elder is an ancient herb and was widely regarded throughout the ages as 'the medicine chest of the country folk'. it was allegedly the oldest herb cultivated by man. Both the berry and flower were once used to treat allergies, asthma, to reduce the incidence of colds and flu which were killers in the damp winters of northern europe. They were used in skincare and the flower is reputed to help sleeping problems."

"We chose olives because we thought we could replicate the 'cool climate wine story' – that is, make a different style of olive oil that was clearly distinguished from commodity extra virgin olive oils currently available in Australia. We wanted to produce oil that was different. Most mainland oils can't replicate the style of oil that can be produced at lower latitudes or in cooler regions
